

Simon Cohen Biography

"I am passionate about the power of the media to inspire positive social change."

Simon Cohen is an international speaker, consultant and trainer in communications and ethics. A Theology graduate, specialising in religious pluralism, he is passionate about putting an end to intolerance in the media and set up global tolerance to help harness the power of the media for positive social change, using pr and communications as his tool. He has spoken on media ethics and on religion in the media at numerous international events including the Economic Forum in Poland, The World Spirit Forum in Arosa, Universal Forum of Cultures in Monterrey, the Parliament of the World Religions in Barcelona and at Worlds Religions After 9/11 in Montreal.

Wanting to help others to realise the positive potential of the media, Simon has run media training courses in numerous places around the world including Barcelona, Switzerland, Canada and the United States.

Simon's courage to tackle the challenges in the media is inspiring. He launched the first national conference on religion and the media and has since become a leading figure in media ethics offering his opinion in television and radio interviews. He is also an accredited writer with the British Association of Journalists and has articles published in national and international publications.

Simon is a lateral and creative thinker with an excellent understanding of the media and what makes 'a story' (see the Jedi Knight campaign. Mix this with a sensitivity to world faiths and a fantastic ability to engage genuinely with people from all walks of life and it is easy to understand why Simon was voted by PRWeek and Mediaweek as one of the top young PR and media professionals in the UK.

Simon is full of energy, loves spending time with his nephew Joshua and has some enviable moves on the dancefloor.
